The official Kickstarter campaign launches this Halloween season, and we can't wait to share everything we've been working on. As a thank you for signing up early, we're offering an exclusive early bird discount for the first backers, so be sure to jump in the moment the campaign goes live.

Thanks again, and we'll see you in Amberfield.

The Vesperlight Blade

Weapon (longsword), rare

Recovered from the vestry of Amberfield's chapel, this blade's fuller runs with a vein of hardened amber that glows faintly gold. As a bonus action, you can cause it to shed bright light in a 20-foot radius. While lit, you have advantage on attack rolls against corrupted or undead creatures. If the blade ever draws blood from an innocent, the light fails until the next dawn.

The Furrow's Grasp

Weapon (improvised), uncommon, cursed

Farmer's rake, though the tines have twisted into curling roots, damp with something that isn't sap. As an action, you can hurl it at a target within 30 feet, dealing 2d6 piercing damage and rooting them in place (DC 13 Strength save ends) until the start of your next turn. The rake crawls back to your hand afterward on its own. Once attuned, it cannot be willingly discarded.

Lantern of the Last Stall

Wondrous item, common

A copper lantern from one of the festival's game stalls, its glass fogged with old candle smoke. While lit, it never guttered out in wind or rain during the festival's forty-year run. As an action, you can shake it to release a shower of harmless orange sparks in a 5-foot radius, just enough to startle a creature or light a dark corner without alarm.
